

Sir Stuffy's Quest

Once upon a time there lived a very happy man he was called Sir Stuffy. Sir Stuffy was very kind, he loved to help people and willingly did jobs for others. He was very brave, strong and mighty but had a very soft nature.

One day he was walking through the kingdom and came across a poster. It said 'Princess Sophia has gone missing if anyone knows where she is please come and see the royal king and queen'. Sir Stuffy felt sorry for them including Princess Sophia so he decided to go and look for her but first he thought he should get the king and queen's permission. As he turned around he noticed a very big tower "I'll never get up there I'll be on day and night," he said. He looked, thinking of a quicker way to get to the top but he couldn't think of anything so he just went up. When he got to the top he saw the king and queen sitting on their royal thrones sobbing. Sir Stuffy knocked and went in. He told the King and Queen how much he wanted to find the Princess. "Okay, you can go and find our daughter, however you must bring her home straight away," exclaimed the king. "Of course," Sir Stuffy said walking out the room. As he got to the bottom of the tower his quest had began!

Walking through the dark forest, with nothing but tree's surrounding him he thought what he was going to use to help him get the Princess back home safely. Just then he saw a pair of boots on the ground that were in much better condition than his, so he put them on. Then he felt his feet burning he looked down and the grass under his feet was black. He noticed some writing on the boots it said 'boots of shock'. "They will be useful" he said and carried on his quest.

He began to think about who could have the princess whether it would be a monster, a man, a women or even a giant. Through the tree's he ventured thinking of all the possibilities. He noticed a small opening in the forest as he got closer he saw a man in a castle he went over to see if he was in trouble. "Are you alright up there?" Sir Stuffly shouted.

"Yes I'm fine but what are you doing here it's dangerous in these woods?" he shouted back.

"I'm looking for the missing Princess have you got anything that will help me?" he said hoping that he did.

"Hold on," he said back as he walked into a room in the castle. He came back out and threw down a t-shirt. "That will make you invisible, that should help," he told Sir Stuffly.

"Thank you," Sir Stuffly shouted as he went on his journey through the woods once again.

As he got further into the forest it began to get darker and darker. He knew he was near to the sea as he could smell it and hear the waves. Eventually he reached a village. He then noticed a pair of trousers hanging from a washing line. He took them down, they were exactly the right size. He decided to put them on. "Be wise with them my child!" said a little old woman. "They make you fly there not ordinary."

"Oh, well these will come in handy for my quest," he said and started to walk out of the village.

When he got behind the village he came to a cliff, "Where should I go now?" he thought. Then all of a sudden he heard crying. He noticed that the crying was coming from an under sea cave. He went down and he swam until he reached it. As he looked in he saw the princess crying, and he lifted up his foot from the floor.....A troll rose from the ground. "Now why are you here?" the troll boomed in a thunderous voice.

"I'm here to rescue the princess" Sir Stuffly replied. "Rescue the princess, you!" he said laughing at Sir Stuffly.

“You can’t rescue her.” Sir Stuffy looked at him and he was very ugly. He had an electric eel for a nose, seaweed for hair, shark fins for feet and hands and was absolutely covered in warts. Sir Stuffy began to form a plan. He noticed three ropes beside him. He remembered that he had collected all of those helpful objects. The shirt of invisibility, the trousers of flight, and the boots of shock. Quick as lightning he made himself invisible and he got the three ropes and tied them all together. He wrapped them around the giant troll’s feet and tied a knot very tightly. He made himself visible again and ran to the princess. He grabbed her hand and ran with her to the entrance. The troll however, had undone the knot. So as Sir Stuffy and Princess Sophia flew out of the cave with his trousers of flight, the troll grabbed Sir Stuffy’s foot. But the troll didn’t know what the boots actually did. He got an electric shock and let go of Sir Stuffy’s foot, then fell through the floor and through the bottom of the cave.

Princess Sophia and Sir Stuffy quickly flew back to the King and Queen’s castle. They were never bothered by the troll again, and they both lived happily ever after.